Summary: A poem about a marines sadness.

Daily Event

Small Poem about a UNSC Marine in combat during the Raid on the Silent Cartographer's island on Alpha Halo.

Our boots sank in the mud,

Our clothes, soaked with blood.

I looked and saw my best friend Dave,

Two weeks since his last shave.

We spent fourteen days

Fighting in a dizzy haze.

Combat on world after world,

Makes you wanna hurl.

Dave goes down,

Kevin too.

I stand there silent,

Alone on some distant island.

I feel some pain,

And then I die.

An everyday thing,

In a marines life.

I cooked this up playing Halo Combat Evolved this morning (8/5/07) fighting for the Silent Cartographer on Legendary. By everyday thing in a marine's life I mean that marines basically die everyday in the war against the Covenant. And when marines see their friends go down one by one they feel "pain" and then they "die" a little. Or at least, I would anyway.

End
file.
